There are mainly two factors contributing to my preference.
To begin with, with the unemployment rate running high in most big cities, job security is becoming less and less guaranteed. However, those who study science are more likely to find a decent job, since a number of positions require science students.
Furthermore, the late 90s had seen the birth and boom of the Internet, which was starting to convince people of its advantage in speeding up communication. Indeed, modern technology considerably alters the way people communicate with each other. Therefore, science can promote our social and economic development.

science is very important to our life.

There are two fundamental factors contributing to the importance of innovation.
To begin with, owing to the steady and rapid economic development of our country, people's living standard is simultaneously improving at a fast rate. In my opinion, innovation is surely the driving force behind the economic growth.
Furthermore, time and again, science and technology has created wonders and even miracles, thus fortifying our belief in it. For example, invented some 60 years ago, computers which are a typical example of innovation have already transformed the way most of us live.

Two fundamental factors are involved in understanding this social phenomenon.

To begin with, if robots take most of our jobs in the future, the unemployment rate will run high in most big cities, and job security will become less and less guaranteed.

Furthermore, it is fair to assert that it is science and technology that should be given most of the credit in fabricating our modern life. Robots will have transformed the way most of us live. For example, robots can also do many dangerous jobs for us, such as mining and diving.

Two fundamental factors are involved in understanding the importance of building trust in the workplace.

To begin with, establishing trust allows one to avoid the conflict.
For example, in modern society where competition is intense, young people are under enormous strain from their work and family. However, trust can help us relax our mind and create a harmonious working environment.

Furthermore, trust is hard to build but easy to lose.
It is well-known that we exist in a dynamic world with various difficulties.
We can do nothing but face them. Building trust is the key point to take the first step.

Furthermore, trust is hard to build but easy to lose. According to a recent survey conducted by YiMagazine, about 56.3% of the employers all agree that their success can be ascribed to building trust with their staff.

Two fundamental factors are involved in understanding the way to balance work and leisure.

To begin with, in modern society where competition is intense, young people are under enormous strain from their work and family. Therefore, most of them work extremely hard and may cause certain diseases. I suggest that they should never work excessively.

Furthermore, owing to the steady and rapid economic development of our country, people's living standard is simultaneously improving at a fast rate. Nowadays, people can have more time to take leisure activities after work, such as jogging and climbing mountains.

开头

- In contemporary society where social problems abound, it is of utmost importance for youngsters to take up community responsibility. For example, the recent years have witnessed a sharp increase in the number of young people who are willing to do community service, playing a role in helping the society better its condition. ~~This definitely exerts a huge impact on our life.~~

Two fundamental factors are involved in understanding the importance of having the sense of community responsibility. First and foremost, with the rapid development of the economy and society, public morality has declined to an extent. Numerous people are becoming indifferent to the living environment and the people around them. It is we who should assume the responsibility to raise public awareness and popularize appropriate education.

开头:

- An ancient philosopher once stated that “the best preparation for tomorrow is doing your best today.” Even though it is the wisdom of our forefathers/ancestors, this remark can be applied in many cases even today. It implies that one should emphasize on the present moment rather than distant future.
